are pleased to present...

“Would you repeat that?”

Strategies for Improving Hearing in Everyday Life

Many of us experience communication difficulties on a daily basis, especially in the pandemic era. Regardless of whether you have hearing loss or not, you may find yourself struggling to understand more than ever in common daily activities such as watching television, shopping, going to church, attending social gatherings, and dining out. This informative presentation will discuss strategies for reducing the load of listening, preventing communication breakdowns, and improving your quality of life.

Please join us!

Dr. Lisa Fox-Thomas, Ph.D., CCC-A (AP Professor of Audiology and Assistant Director at the UNC Greensboro Speech and Hearing Center) will present information and answer your questions about improving your listening in everyday situations.

Date and Time: Monday, November 8, 2021 from 1:00—2:30 pm

Location: Zoom (visit csd.uncg.edu to click the link under News and Announcements or click here to join the presentation)

Email us your questions! hearing@uncg.edu by November 1, 2021

Visit us on Facebook: www.facebook.com/uncgaudiologyclinic